Goal

Metabolomic studies seek to identify the molecular and chemical footprints of cells that reflect cellular exposures and responses to changing physiological environments. Quantitative assessments of metabolic substrates and products, lipids, vitamins, and cofactors provide information about the nutritional and oxidative state of a cell. Metabolic changes are emerging as hallmarks of cancer that can be exploited as biomarkers and employed as a reporter of cancer grades and severity. The symposia will discuss molecular and cellular changes that occur in metabolism, how the microenvironment and stromal tissue can directly affect metabolism, how the metabolic environment around a lesion can directly affect treatment response, and ways metabolism can be exploited for therapy and for direct in vivo imaging in cancer systems. In addition, recent advances in understanding how metabolism can directly affect oncogenesis, such as in the context of oncometabolites and reductive carboxylation, will be discussed.

Keynote speakers are Naveep S. Chandel, PhD (Northwestern University) and Kevin F. Brindle, PhD (University of Cambridge). In addition, Craig B. Thompson, MD (Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center) will receive the Ernst W. Bertner Memorial Award and Chi V. Dang, MD, PhD (University of Pennsylvania) will receive the Heath Memorial Award. There will also be a poster session for participants to represent their findings. The symposia begins Thursday morning and will end Friday afternoon.
Target Audience

The program will be of broad interest to scientists, physician-scientists, scientists-in-training, physicians, physicians-in-training, students, nurses, and fellows interested in hearing the latest methodologies to study tumor metabolism, microenvironment, and bioenergetics, and how data emerging from this research are impacting translational research, metabolic imaging, and personalized medicine.

Educational Objectives

After attending the Symposia, participants should be able to:

1. Defining metabolic changes that occur in cancer cells and in their microenvironment, as well as mechanistic interplay between cell signaling, metabolism and bioenergetics;
2. Demonstration of emerging imaging technologies that allow observation of metabolic changes in vivo and translation to the clinic;
3. Understanding how metabolic changes can directly affect cancer oncogenesis.

Educational Methods

Lectures • Question-and-Answer Sessions • Panel Discussions • Posters

Call for Abstracts

Abstracts may be submitted for the Poster Session and must be received no later than August 4, 2017. Please submit to Research2017@mdanderson.org.

Trainees (undergraduate, graduate, medical students, or postdoctoral fellows) submitting abstracts for the symposia may request to be considered for an oral presentation, Poster Award, and lunch with speakers by checking the appropriate box on the registration form. Abstracts will be judged by the organizing committee, and the 2 top abstracts will be chosen to give an 8 minute/2 minute Q & A oral presentation.
Should you have difficulty with the submission, call the Department of CME/Conference Management at 713-745-5000 for guidance. Participants will be notified of their posters’ acceptance by mail or e-mail by August 25, 2017. Please indicate the person to whom correspondence should be sent if other than the first author and include an address, telephone number, fax number, and e-mail address (if available) when submitting the abstract. Registration for the symposium must be submitted at the same time as the abstract. Please register at www.mdanderson.org/conferences.

Young Investigator Travel Fellowship Awards

A limited number of travel fellowships will be available to graduate and medical students, postdoctoral fellows, and physicians in training. Only those applicants who submit abstracts will be considered for an award, which is intended to offset some of the expenses incurred by the recipient in connection with attending the symposium. Anyone wishing to apply for a travel fellowship should check the appropriate box on the registration form and attach a letter of recommendation. This letter should be on official letterhead, be signed by the dean or department head, and contain the following information about the applicant (due by August 4, 2017):

1. academic status
2. research activities in the subject area of the meeting
3. citations of recent articles in this subject area published in peer-reviewed journals
Registration will open at 7:00 a.m. on Thursday, October 5, 2017.
